seen hundreds of alligators and crocodiles in the course of my wanderings, but I once had the pleasure of destroying in a novel and most effectual manner a great maneating cayman, as the crocodile is called in South America."

"Was he like my alligator?" asked Bryce. "Very like him, the only difference being that while your alligator is only about six teen inches long, my cayman was a little over sixteen feet, and as ugly a looking over sixteen feet, and as ugly a looking monster as ever swam. I had been detached from the Porpoise and ordered to explore a portion of Venezuela, in company with a portion of Venezuela, in company with a portion of Venezuela, in company with a party of American engineers who were constructing a telegraph line for the Government of that country. We were following down a tributary of the great river Orinoco, and rested one Sunday at a little Indian village on the bank of the stream. During the afternoon, as we were all lying asleep in our hammocks, there came a terrible scream ing and crying from the village and we ran to see what was up.

"It seemed that several boys had been bathing in the river just below the village, when all at once, without the slightest warning, one of them had been seized and drawn

As we were to be in that vicinity for several days, we waited until we thought it was about time for the cayman to be hungry again. Then we shot a fat monkey, sewed inside of him a stone bottle containing five pounds of powder, inserted in it the ends of two long coils of fine and connected the est bar. containing five pounds of powder, inserted in it the ends of two long coils of fine wire, bound these to strong ropes of equal length, and connected the other ends with the little test battery that we carried

We had waited in perfect silence for more than an hour, and were about ready to give it up, when there came a ripple in the water, and a huge head, with horrid, open jaws, was cautiously lifted. Then the jaws closed with a snap upon our tait, the head instantly disappeared, and the ropes began to turn swif ly out, showing that the monster was battery, and quickly connected the wires. Like a flash there came a deep muffled explication, a torrent of blood stained water was therein high in the air, and mingled with it were fragments of the scaly hide of the mossier, in whose side a hole two feet some held hear blown.

A STRANGE case of recovery from lockjaw is reported from Savannah, Ga. Five weeks ago a man was taken to St. Joseph's Infirmary who was suffering from tetanus. His friends said that it had been produced in s ma way from an attempt to break in a fractions colt. He had been riding the anifractious colt. He had been riding the animal around the track in the rear of his stables, when it had shied and run against the fence. The man fell from its back and when he was picked up was unconscious and shortly afterward lockjaw set in. The surgeons at the Infirmary were unable to reduce the symptoms, though the usual reme apparently dying condition and quite unconscious for five weeks. One of his front teeth had to be oroken to admit a tube through which liquid for decay and the second sec through which liquid food was administered. He rested on the back of his head and heels, his body being arched and the muscles of his back like those of his jaws being contracted. His case was almost despaired of when one day in a paroxysm of pain the palm of his left hand was exposed. An attendant looked at it and saw the end of a splinter of wood projecting. He pulled the splinter out and found it to be an inch and a quarter long. Almost immediately the patient's paroxysm ceased, the muscles of his back and jaws relaxed and he is gradually recov ering. But for the discovery and removal of the splinter, it is believed he would have
